CAVALRY OF THE CLOUDS

By "CONTACT" (Capt. Alan Bott, M.C.)

One of the great, true "personal experience" stories of the war. What "The First Hundred Thousand" did for the Citizen Army and "Over the Top" did for the Infantryman, "Cavalry of the Clouds" does for the aviator in the newest and most adventurous branch of warfare. (Net, $1.25.)

THE FALSE FACES

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

The forerunner of a new class of mystery and detective story made possible by the war and bound to become immensely popular. Here is exposed the Prussian spy peril in our very midst, tracked down by "the Lone Wolf," now serving the Allied cause. (Net, $1.40.)

THE KENTUCKY WARBLER

By JAMES LANE ALLEN

A tale to warm the hearts of Mr. Allen's large following, for it is written in the manner and spirit of "A Kentucky Warbler" and his other successes. The charming story of a lad's contact with Nature, and its lasting effect in developing his character. (Net, $1.25.)

THE FULL MEAS- URE of DEVOTION

By DANA GATLIN

"The Full Measure of Devotion"—the words are Lincoln's and here is the spirit of Lincoln, alive in the hearts of a modern father and mother called upon to make the great sacrifice for Democracy. (Net, 50 cents.)

HARRY BUTTERS, R. F. A.

The Life and Letters of a California Boy Who Was Killed Fighting on the Somme Edited by Mrs. Denis O'Sullivan. With 12 illustrations. 12mo. Cloth. $1.50 net.

The letters published in this book, which had been sent home to various members of Lieut. Butters' family in California, were written at high pressure and with feelings which burst the restraint of the commonplace and conventional. Harry Butters was but a lad in years, but a man in sight and sense of proportions, and it was this which made the correspondence so apart from the usual letters which have come from abroad.

THE INVISIBLE GUIDE

By C. LEWIS HIND, Author of "Augustus Saint Gaudens," etc. 12mo. Cloth $1.00 net.

A question which many are putting to themselves in these days is "How may I enter into communion and fellowship with the departed?" Mr. Lewis Hind in this book gives us an answer. Here is a record of how the presence of a dear friend killed in the war was first made known and the fellowship of the early days; then how the presence gradually faded, only to return later with an added sense of the spiritual transcending all material values. It is a choice book which will make a strong appeal to those seeking comfort at this time.

A Baffling Detective Story by Watson & Rees The Two Ex-Detectives of Scotland Yard THE MYSTERY OF THE DOWNS

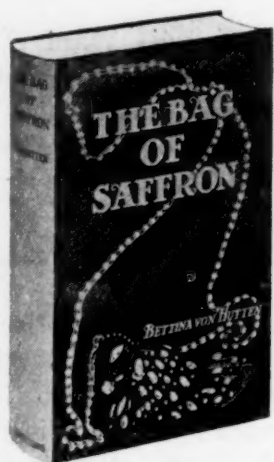

By the Authors of "The Hampstead Mystery"

This is an unusually exciting tale even for a detective story for it contains mystery within mystery. There is first a murder by some person or persons unknown on a lonely sea coast at night. Then as the reader begins to feel assured that he has rightly guessed the identity of the criminal, suspicion turns about and points a finger at the prosecutor himself, about whom are circulating dubious rumors as to his conduct as officer at the Front. Everything works out, however, to the satisfaction of the reader, and a love story, involving a very handsome girl whose part in the tragedy is one of the many mysteries of the tale, adds to the attraction of the book.

I cannot praise too highly Dr. McCarthy's book. He gives in detail an account of prison conditions in Germany. The better treatment of the prisoners is largely owing to his work and that of Dr. Taylor and the other American inspectors. From this book, the friends of Americans unlucky enough to fall into the hands of the Huns, will know what treatment these prisoners may expect. It is a problem of interest to all of us.

PROGRESS IN 1918

AS we turn the corner into the new year 1918, it is in the hope that the world will see a happier year before the new becomes old. Our country has joined in the crusade against the autocracy and injustice which has plunged the world into world war and world woe. The year that has just closed was one of increasing and perhaps culminating strain, a strain which this country has just begun to feel, and which must show itself in increasing stress and increased taxes. Notwithstanding the disadvantages of the war, however, the book-trade in England has held its own and done its part, while in this country the year past has been fairly prosperous, and there is good reason to believe that the coming year, tho it will bring heavier burdens on all industries, will continue reasonable prosperity for our own trade. With the new year, too, comes the dawn of a hope that within the year a solution of world problems will be found that will justify the sacrifices of the war and make for a just and abiding peace, thru the triumph of principles in which our country, thru its President, has undertaken an unselfish championship.

At this time statement of peace aims on the part of the nations, good resolutions on the part of individuals and developments of plan and purpose of such periodicals as the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY are in order. We would emphasize again the basic principle which we have always upheld that publishing and book-selling constitute one trade, identical in interest, tho diverse and complementary in field. True to this conviction the WEEKLY has striven at all times and will continue to strive for betterment in those directions which, however much they may seem to favor one or the other group, lead toward a closer integration and a better understanding in the trade as a whole. Between the Bolsheviki no-compromisers and the militarist no-compromisers in the book-trade there are differences seemingly as acute as those in present European affairs and unfortunately there is a state of disorganization often suggestive of Bolshevism. Yet just as surely as affairs in Europe are driving toward the time when all parties concerned must sit down together to build, not without compromise on both sides, a better world organization, so surely the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY feels publishers and booksellers must with patience and constructive suggestion unite in the solution of their common problems.

There has been some restlessness among both publishers and booksellers during the year past, the usual taunt of "Physician heal thyself" being heard from the one side in response to vigorous protests and complaints from the other. Many problems such as those centering about the vexed question of direct selling by publishers are carried over into the new year in approximately as unsettled condition as ever. It is to be hoped that 1918 sees some definite progress toward a better understanding in certain of these respects and for this service the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY re-enlists as in the past. It is because the WEEKLY feels that the larger education of the trade and particularly the better training of bookstore assistants lies at the root of most of these difficulties as perhaps the most fundamental of all trade problems that it is glad to contribute toward this forward movement with the inauguration next week in its columns of a course in book-selling under the skilled direction of Miss Graham, director of the Philadelphia Booksellers' School. This is indeed but one step forward, but that the proposal for the course should have met with such enthusiastic endorsement from publishers and booksellers alike is indicative of a common realization that thru such constructive co-operative methods rather than thru incrimination and recrimination does the way out for the trade lie.

WITH 1918 Mr. Robert S. Lynd becomes managing editor of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, and we bespeak for him on the part of the publishing and bookselling trade continuance and increase of the confidence and co-operation which he has earned while office editor of this publication. Mr. Fremont Rider retires from the service of the R. R. Bowker Company, the change enabling him to give more free attention to the Rider Press and to the Cumulative Digest Corporation, which publishes the Business Digest and the International Military Digest, and with which the R. R. Bowker Company has no business relations. The R. R. Bowker Company has resumed proprietorship of Information, which had been transferred to the Cumulative Digest Corporation but was discontinued, the Business Digest being supplied in its place. It is not intended, however, to resume publication of this periodical during the present year, especially in view of increased costs of paper and printing.

ENGLISH AUTHORS' COMMITTEE REPORTS ON ACTIVITIES OF LITERARY AGENTS

OWING to the general practice in this country of authors treating directly with their publishers, the literary agent is relatively less important than in England. In the latter country at the present time, however, there is a distinct movement, fostered by the Society of Authors, to lessen, or rather to restrict, the activities of agents, and tho such a movement touches American publishers usually but indirectly it is nevertheless of considerable interest.

DEVELOPMENT OF LITERARY AGENTS IN ENGLAND

The literary and dramatic agent sprang into prominence in England some thirty years ago as a go-between to see that the unbusinesslike author drove the most advantageous bargain possible with his publisher or producer.

Then, to quote the special report recently issued by the Agents' Sub-Committee of the English Authors' Society, "as International Treaties, culminating in the Revised Convention of Berne, and the U. S. A. Copyright Law, came into force, British authors found their markets were considerably widened, but rarely took the trouble to acquire the necessary knowledge to benefit by that extension.

"In these early days the agent obtained 10 per cent. for his work thruout the duration of the contract, that is, in many cases thruout the term of copyright. At the present, under the Copyright Act of 1911, the agent or his heirs would draw fees for the life of the author and fifty years after his death, a period which might extend for over a century. . . . No other agent is paid at so extravagant a rate. If a solicitor is instructed to draft a contract he is paid a fixed fee for the work done. If a land agent or a house agent is employed to let a property he is paid a fixed percentage on the first year's rent. There is no need to multiply instances. The literary or dramatic agent may, and often does, make £1000 and more out of a single contract. Moreover, where he is likely to make the largest sums he is likely to have the least labour. In other words, the agency fee varies inversely with the labour expended.

"In the early days the position was not so unfair, as the agent had to charge his small number of patrons a large fee to make a living. At the present time the Sub-Committee consider the position preposterous. Therefore in both literary and dramatic affairs the Sub-Committee consider that the fees of an agent should be fixed to a limited amount on each transaction.

"The agent gradually extended his sphere from literary to dramatic work; but with prosperity came slackness and a desire to make his money with the least trouble to himself, and a corresponding indifference to the welfare of his patrons; till at the present time he is often a veritable old man of the sea around the author's neck. As a result of this indifference many advantages which the agents—even the most reliable—gave away in the first instance on one or two occasions, have now become the publisher's and manager's ordinary demand."

WHEN TO EMPLOY AN AGENT AND WHAT TO AVOID

A standardized dramatic agency contract and a literary agency contract have been issued by the Authors' Society. Consequently, as the necessary knowledge and even legal information incident to the intelligent marketing of manuscript can be obtained from the Society, the Sub-Committee recommends that "in no circumstances should authors who, living near the central markets, have time and capacity to deal with their own works, employ an agent."

In summing up what agents should be avoided the report points out in part that many agents start on a "shoe string" and lack adequate knowledge of copyright and other essential matters. Or agents—especially dramatic agents—may assume the right to act as principals, or act for publishers, editors and managers in addition to acting for the author, "sometimes to the great peril of the author." Again many agents advertise prizes for authors and many agents are continually adding extra small expenses. Finally, "United States agents are especially difficult to deal with" on account of their remoteness and different business methods.

Having chosen an agent, the report goes on to warn authors, "it may be convenient to limit an agent to placing a certain piece only; in that case the author must be careful not to enter into competition with the agent. Or, it may be convenient to limit an agent's activity to certain markets and to certain countries; equally in this case the author must be careful not to enter into competition. Or, in cases where the author has obtained the introduction (i.e., placed his play or book) and the agent is called in merely to negotiate the contract and collect the fees, his commission should only be 5 per cent up to half the fixed figure referred to later. Or, perhaps the most important point of all refers to the collection of moneys under contracts."

AGENTS SHOULD BE PROTECTED ALSO

On this last point the Committee agrees that an agent should be protected against an unscrupulous author but warns authors against allowing an agent to make his appointment irrevocable by inserting the so-called "agency clause" of which the following is a typical example:

All moneys due under this agreement shall be paid to the author's representative, whose receipt shall be a full and sufficient discharge of the obligation, and the said agent is hereby empowered by the author to conduct all negotiations in respect of the said work with the publishers."

"An agent is dealing unfairly, indeed almost fraudulently, who presents a publisher's or manager's agreement and inserts the agency clause without comment. . . . The Sub-Committee, from collected information, have never known an agent call an author's attention to this clause."

AUTHORS' RIGHTS SUMMARIZED

Among the sins of commission and omission that may result from allowing an agent to draw up a book publishing contract for an author are the following:

"1. Minor Rights.—An agent often concedes to a publisher an author's minor rights such as serial rights, translation rights, and cheap production rights. The advantage to the agent is two-fold. First he gets his percentage without trouble when the rights are sold, and then the publisher, not being an agent, often places these rights back with the agent, who can reap his second commission, and the author has to pay the publisher's claim—generally an extravagant one.

"2. Future Books.—An agent is nearly always convinced that an author should cede some further books to the publisher beyond the one for which the author is contracting. This is a development of recent years most disastrous to the author if the new books are published on the terms conceded for the first book; still more disastrous if the terms of the original agreement include minor rights. For the agent the arrangement is most satisfactory, because, without any further trouble he draws his 10 per cent for all the books included in the contract.

"3. Dramatic and Cinematograph Rights.—These rights are sometimes enormously lucrative to an author and should never be included in a book publisher's contract. An agent, therefore, could only think of transferring an interest in those rights to a publisher in order to make a certainty of securing without further trouble his percentage when they are dealt with subsequently.

"4. Royalties.—It would be thought a natural deduction that an agent would always struggle to get the best terms for an author, but unfortunately this is not the case. In an eagerness to make money it is much more important for the agent to settle six contracts quickly than two slowly. In other words, it does not pay an agent to struggle for an extra 2½ per cent for the author, or for slightly better terms. Besides, it is to the advantage of the agent himself to remain in the good graces of the publisher.

"5. Accounts.—It has been already pointed out that an agent gets his 10 per cent in obtaining the author's signature to a contract. He also nearly always secures to himself the collection of the accounts. The Sub-Committee regret to say that the agent, secure in his position and his 10 per cent, has no stimulus to give any further consideration to the accounts, and therefore nearly always neglects to check them when he collects and sends them to the author.

"6. At the widest a publisher's contract should be for book publication in the English language in Great Britain, its colonies and dependencies. Any agent who binds his patron beyond this is doing so to his patron's disadvantage.

"7. Altho it is all in favor of the agent if a contract can be assigned, it is his duty to insist on the contract being a personal contract with the publisher.

"8. The contract granting a licence to publish in book form must be terminable on the bankruptcy of the publisher or the breach of any of the clauses, and under other circumstances equitable to the publisher. Failure to insist upon some such clause is disastrous to the author's chances.

"9. Agents frequently in order to make an easier settlement allow words of indefinite meaning such as "reasonable," "wilful," "essential," "flagrant," etc., to creep into the contract. These words should be struck out, as in case of dispute they will need nothing less than a judge to define their meaning.

"10. Agency Clause in contracts with Publishers.—This point has already been touched upon. No author should allow such a clause in a contract."

Here follow some pages devoted to the relations of authors, agents and theatrical managers. Strong complaint is also lodged against the nuisance of the "touting agent" who sends veiled offers of advantageous contracts, sometimes entirely non-existent, to authors and use this introduction to inveigle the author into their clutches.

REMEDIES

"The Sub-Committee in suggesting remedies for the evils that have been put forward in the report, desire first to suggest those remedies which can be easily applied.

"A.—No agent should receive the recommendation of the Society who acts as principal or partner in placing literary or dramatic property on the market.

"B.—No agent should receive the recommendation of the Society, if he acts for publishers in placing authors' rights unless

(1) he has author's sanction so to act.

(2) He undertakes not to undersell the author's usual prices.

"C.—No agent should receive the recommendation of the Society if he acts for managers or others in placing authors' rights.

"The Sub-Committee desire to deal with the agents from the point of view of the agreements they enter into. No agent should receive the recommendation of the Society if he shows a constant disregard in the settlement of a literary agreement of the author's rights.

"A.—By failing to reserve the minor rights such as serial rights, etc., to the author.

"B.—By granting to publishers the rights for future books.

"C.—By granting to the publishers dramatic and cinematograph rights.

"D.—By carelessness in checking accounts received from publishers.

"E.—By insisting upon the insertion of the usual agency and collection clause without the fullest explanation in writing to the author.

"F.—By failing to insist on the contract being a personal contract and to insert a proper clause for the termination of the agreement.

"NOTE.—The Sub-Committee have only included those clauses in which under ordinary circumstances the authors' and agents' interests might be at variance. Neglect of other ordinary clauses would at once disqualify an agent."

A corresponding series of recommendations cover the dramatic agent's qualifications.

"The Sub-Committee secondly desire to deal with what are the most important points as between agent and author, a satisfactory remedy for which it is difficult to suggest, namely—

1. The amount received by the agent for his services and
2. The method of collection of the amount.

"With regard to the first point the Sub-Committee think it should be possible to obtain the signature of a large number of authors undertaking not to employ any agent unless that agent consents to accept 10 per cent only up to £250 for book or cinema contracts, and £500 for dramatic contracts. When these amounts have been reached the agent's claim to further fees would be terminated unless the author desired him to continue collecting his money. Then all further collection should be on a 5 per cent basis, and the author's authority could be withdrawn with a fortnight's notice. If the Society can gain one literary agent and one dramatic agent to work for authors on these terms and can obtain the signature of some 200 authors the matter would be practically settled and placed on an equitable basis. The present position the Sub-Committee think preposterous. The agents, save in exceptional cases, have been able to maintain the perpetual 10 per cent figure because there has been, as against publishers in the past so now against agents, insufficient combination and lack of guidance.

"With regard to the second point the Sub-Committee think in those cases where, for one reason or another the agent has become entitled to draw 10 per cent thru the term of copyright on a contract, that it is grossly unfair to the author to be forced to submit to the agent's continuing this collection, however honest and financially sound the agent might be. The agent's side, as already put forward, has been considered by the Sub-Committee, and they think that it would be fair to the agent, in those cases where the author was unwilling that the agent should continue the collection, if future collections were in the hands of some responsible party like the Society itself, rather than in the hands of the individual agent or in the hands of the individual author, but it is quite clear that the Society could not collect large amounts and in large numbers for nothing. The usual collection undertaken by the Society is at the rate of 5 per cent. The Sub-Committee suggest that when for any reason an author desires an agent to cease collecting he should be entitled to force the agent to cease on the understanding that the collection is put into the hands of the Society. The Society should charge 2 per cent of the agent's 10 per cent and the author should be willing to pay an extra 1 per cent. In other words the Society should collect on a 3 per cent basis, the author having to pay 11 per cent, instead of 10 per cent out of his returns. The Sub-Committee consider that in order to save the difficulties of making this arrangement with each member they should approach the agents individually and obtain from them a general agreement on this basis. Then all members of the Society would have the right, in the case of those agents who had come to the agreement, to take the collection from them on the understanding that the Society was responsible."

MR. BRAITHWAITE ON THE POETRY OF 1917

WILLIAM STANLEY BRAITHWAITE'S "Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1917"—just published under the imprint of Small, Maynard & Co., Laurence J. Gomme, the former publisher of this series being no longer in business—has some interesting speculations for publishers in its preface as to "which way the wind blows" in things poetical at the present time. This first year of the war for us, in the United States does not seem to have affected the output of poetry to any great degree; so far its influence has been chiefly that of furnishing another subject from which the imagination may draw. "Of the books of the year," says Mr. Braithwaite, "I think I can say with even greater assurance than last year that, 'the excitement of finding first-rate poetry produced by American poets in our day has, perhaps, somewhat subsided with the public; and they are taking their gifts more soberly and solidly.' The fear which I have often heard expressed during the past year of a declining public interest in poetry, is not, I think, true. We have hardly more than established a native art in the past few years, and like all establishments, it was attended with excitement; but the era is just getting settled into its stride and while there will be little excitement of surprise and self-satisfaction over the possession of a national art in the next few years to come, there will continue to be a wide, deep, and compensatory appreciation of American poets and poetry."

Mr. Braithwaite also avers in his preface that we do not need to worry about our national art, but rather about the criticism of that art: "The last decade, while poetry was developing, criticism as a function of appraisal did not exist. There was, of course, a body of critical writing in America, but when it concerned itself with poetry, it dealt mainly with the past . . . What Arthur Symons was doing in England nobody dared to do in America. . . . The year 1916 witnessed the development of the present growth in American poetry to the point where a critical reaction will be fatal to its further progress. This renaissance, now firmly accepted by everybody as a definite movement in American life and literature, was fully a decade coming to maturity. It grew upon the fostering appreciation of the few who created a hearing for the art; that hearing established an audience and the audience quickened the creative impulse of the poets. The Renaissance became a fact. . . . My belief is that the year 1916 may be the pivot upon which the art of poetry in America will advance or recede."

Aside from this fear as to the bent American poetical criticism will take, Mr. Braithwaite expresses no fear for the subject of this criticism itself. He finds the fiber of our poetry

"persuasively healthy," but bids us remember that our qualities of civilization are different from those of Europe and England, and must therefore be judged by no dogmatic principles or necessarily by standardized forms. "The stronger personal reaction to normal experience" found in American poetry offsets the "mellow, atmospheric, retrospective" quality in the art of older countries, nor can we afford to sacrifice any of our vibrant, fresh appeal. The present volume has been animated by this opinion, and in his selection from the magazine verse of the present year the compiler has kept well in mind "the intense fiber and texture of our national existence."

RICHMOND WOMAN CONDUCTING QUAINT BOOK-SHOP

AS one might expect from its quaint name, Mrs. Margaret Dashiell's Serendipity Shop at Richmond, Va., is conducted on original lines. Walpole declared, "Serendipity is the art of finding out things, books, prints, lost poets and cryptic and obscure authors"—and this is what Mrs. Dashiell undertakes for her clients. In more modern and less picturesque terms, she is selling and subscription agent for books and periodicals, American or foreign, specializing in Americana and not spurning the chance to turn a dollar on old furniture and curios. Mrs. Dashiell's stock consists of some really fine children's books, poetry, which she especially enjoys selling, the historic and genealogical books before mentioned, some American fiction but chiefly that by European writers, historic photographs and silhouettes, engravings, paintings, posters, curios, including American costumes from Colonial times to the Civil War period, antique fans, and rare music—a truly "Serendipity" assortment!

The shop is a part of its proprietor's home. It bears no sign, as Mrs. Dashiell says frankly that the general public is not interested in her work; her treasures appeal rather to the general public and this very "exclusiveness" is a leading card with her limited clientele. In a section of the country where the tradition and lore of the past are particularly cherished, Mrs. Dashiell has wisely chosen to specialize in Americana relating to Virginia and Louisiana. Her sales are largely the result of intensive correspondence. In selling historic books connected with colonial life and the Civil War she writes special letters to persons whose families are mentioned, calling their attention to the fact and stating certain definite reasons why they should own the volumes. In surprisingly many cases these letters result in the purchase of the books, and at good prices, too, for books of this type make no pretence to being cheap.

Another interesting department of this unusual shop is the series of scrap-books on odd and erudite subjects which Mrs. Dashiell compiles. One of these is devoted to interiors of American homes from 1800 to 1890.

When a recent number of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY failed to arrive on time owing to a delay in the mails, Mrs. Dashiell wrote: "Last week's WEEKLY did not reach me. Will you not send it as I consider it an educational course in Americana and study it eagerly. It is the greatest assistance I have."

"ON BUYING OLD BOOKS"

ANOBILIUM, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY's Book Worm, crawled from the dusty pages of Volume A to D of Mr. Growoll's bulging old scrapbook of American book-trade history, slowly, one leg lifted creakingly at a time, for it was cold in the office after dark. By day he lay close under the half glued margin of a picture of the fire which destroyed the old Bowen-Merrill building in Indianapolis years ago—the most exciting thing he had ever found in the office!

Slowly Anobium crawled over the mountainous shapes of the "Trade List Annual" and the "English Catalog," down the side of the book case, across a weary stretch of floor that got dust on his antennae, toward the object of his search, the new books. He was on his nightly spree—and, of course, being a Book Worm and brought up since his earliest years to "hold every man a debtor to his profession" and to observe other PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY traditions, his must needs be a bookish spree.

Mounting valiantly over the baseboard of the nearest shelf, the Book Worm began the dizzying ascent of the first book he bumped his nose against. It proved to be Alfred Kreymborg's "Others" and shaking his head with a grunt he backed precipitately down the binding—he liked neither the taste of the blue stain on the top nor the radical contents, so different from all the traditions of his upbringing. He tried another, which also proved disappointing.

As he traversed the title of a third, spelling it out letter by letter as he walked about the jacket, his heart thumped audibly. One Christian Mentzel, an old 17th century worthy, avers that he once "heard a book-worm crow like a cock"; it may be he heard only the clicking sound the "death-watch" beetles make at their work, but certainly here was an occasion when Anobium might have "crowed like a cock." He licked his musty chops thickly as he spelled out: "T-H-E-R-E'S P-I-P-P-I-N-S A-N-D C-H-E-E-S-E T-O C-O-M-E"!

Forthwith, over the top he sallied and plumped head-first between the pages. "On Buying Old Books" the chapter was headed. No sign of "pippins and cheese"! Now ordinarily, for one who lives on an unending succession of meals of book bindings, such a sudden come-down from the possibility of "pippins and cheese" to just "old books" again would be a small tragedy.

Not so Anobium, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY's Book Worm, however! "Professional stuff," he chortled, settling to a pleasant evening ahead between the pages, all thoughts of stomach gone in the presence of the yet mightier god who rules all true book-men and worms.

"By some slim chance, reader," he began to spell out, letter by letter, walking along the line, "you may be the kind of person who, on a visit to a strange city, makes for a bookshop. . . . Doubtless, we have met. As you have scrunched against the shelf not to block the passage, but with your head thrown back to see the titles up above, you may have noticed at the corner of your eye—unless it was one of your blinder moments when you were fixed wholly on the shelf—a man in a slightly faded overcoat of mixed black and white, a man just past the nimbleness of youth. It was myself.

"Doubtless we have met. It was your umbrella—which you held villainously beneath your arm—that took me in the ribs when you lighted on a set of Fuller's Worthies. You recall my sour looks, but it was because I had myself lingered on the volumes but cooled at the price."

Here the author grew personal and the Book Worm being in a most professional mood loosened his hold and dropped a dozen lines to the next paragraph: "In no proper sense am I a buyer of old books. I admit a bookish quirk maybe, a love of the shelf, a weakness for morocco, especially if it is stained with age. I will indeed shirk a wedding for a bookshop. I'll go in 'just to look about a bit, to see what the fellow has,' and on an occasion I pick up a volume. But I am innocent of first editions. Of course, I have nosed my way with pleasure along aristocratic shelves and flipped out volumes here and there to ask their price, but for the greater part, it is the plainer shops that engage me. If a rack of books is offered cheap before the door, with a fixed price upon a card, I come at a trot. And if a brown dust lies on them, I bow and sniff upon the rack, as tho the past like an ancient fop in peruke and buckle were giving me the courtesy of its snuff box."

The Book Worm pawed his stubby little whiskers delightedly. This was real stuff. He had felt that way often.

It was greying outside thru the big plate glass window when, some hours later, he came to a full stop in his slow reading: "I have in mind such a bookshop in Bath, England. It presents to the street no more than a decent front, but opens up behind like a swollen bottle"—Bottle! Stomach! Food! A guilty pang smote Anobium as he realized that the hour had come for him to eat the book that had nourished him all night. Then a great resolve came—this book at least he would leave unharmed. He would journey elsewhere to eat. He began a last hurried journey thru the rest of the essay, scurrying down the page across such high spots as these: "There is in London a district around Charing Cross Road where almost every shop has books for sale. . . . 'Poor gentry, who, not having wherewithal to buy or hire a book, filch a little learning at the open stalls.' . . . As for Gibbon and the bulbous historians"— . . . and so on. As he was crawling out of the book he noticed another chapter on "Early British Reviewers" but resolved to save that for another time.

It was eight o'clock and broad daylight when Anobium, heavy eyed and full bellied, after biting repeatedly and viciously into a novel by Zane Grey, labored up the side of the white bookcases. Pausing on the cover of Volume A to D of his scrap-book, his little frame shook with something between a yawn and a shiver and then as he mounted to his abode by the tattered yellow and blue headband, he muttered that that chapter "On Buying Old Books," tho perhaps but an indifferent thing as an essay, certainly had the Buchgefühl of a real bookman. He peered out cautiously to make sure the office cat had not heard him think in German, then crawled under his warm fire picture with a resolve that he'd tip the Editor off later to tell the readers of the WEEKLY to look up "There's Pippins and Cheese to Come."

Keeping the American Market for American Publishers

THE following protest against what is regarded, at least in publishing circles, as a glaring loophole in our copyright law was sent by Mr. George Haven Putnam to Mr. Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights, under date of December 20, and has also been forwarded to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

I am obliged to you for calling my attention to the section in your division of the Report of the Librarian of Congress which has to do with the need for amendment of the U. S. Statute in the provision covering international copyright relations. I am in accord with you that the term provided for the protection of a book by ad interim copyright can properly be lengthened. Under normal conditions, the thirty days, or, if properly managed, sixty days, gave sufficient time within which, with an occasional exception, an arrangement for the American edition could be completed and the edition itself could be printed in time for the proper deposit in your office. Under the exceptional conditions in Atlantic transit brought about by the war this term has not proved sufficient. There is, I judge, no reason why it should not be lengthened by at least another thirty days.

You will bear in mind that the objection to a longer term of twelve months, or even six months, was that during the period of months in which arrangements were under consideration for the proposed American edition, the status of the book was anomalous. As soon as a book is advertised and reviewed in the leading literary journals in England, the Athenaeum, Spectator, etc., copies are called for on this side. If an arrangement for an American edition of the book were held up for a considerable term of months, these applicants for copies would be told by the American importers that the book was "not yet available for sale here." If, on the other hand, there was no prohibition on the importation during this ad interim term, and the term covered a number of months, there would be nothing to prevent the English publisher from "stocking up" the American market, or at least from confusing the American market with supplies of the book as printed on the other side.

I am considering a case in which the arrangement for the American edition is made by the author, or by the author's agent (the most frequent method at present) and the English publisher has no business interest in the returns from the American edition. If any considerable number of copies of the English edition had gotten into the market, the American publisher who arranged with the author for the American edition would have on his hands an unsatisfactory bargain, a bargain that might in fact bring him a deficiency instead of a profit. On this ground, I think that the ad interim term ought not to be extended, say, beyond ninety days.

A more serious deficiency in the present law is the futility of the copyright protection given to American publishers making investments in the production of American editions of books originating on the other side of the Atlantic. Ours is the only copyright law in the world which, while going thru the form of granting protection with one hand, takes away with the other a substantial portion of that protection.

All of the American statutes, up to that of 1891, had been framed with the assumption that copyright gave an exclusive control to the producer and to his assign, usually the publisher. It was always admitted that such exclusive control might sometimes result in inconveniences to the public; but it was the contention, a contention upon which all the copyright laws of the world had been based, that the final advantage to the community in the encouragement given to authors producing literary work and to publishers to make investments in the printing of such work, very much more than offset the occasional inconvenience resulting from the actions of an unreasonable or cranky author like Ruskin.

In 1891, for the first time in the history of copyright statutes, the law makers decided, for productions originating abroad, that the protection should be not complete, but partial. This distinction was re-emphasized and extended in the law of 1909. There is, as I have before pointed out, a serious disadvantage to the American publisher who undertakes to purchase under the royalty system, or for a fixed payment, the "rights" in the American market for a book originating in England, when a substantial portion of this market can be taken away, and is taken away, thru the privilege given to libraries and to individuals who import the transatlantic editions of the book so copyrighted. The position is the more absurd in that the one person who is prohibited from making such importation of the transatlantic edition is the owner of the American copyright.

If individual customers of our own retail department express, on one ground or another preference for the English edition, we are prohibited from importing such edition because the provision says such importation must be "for use and not for sale." We can only advise our customer to place his order with an English exporting bookseller. We not only lose the profit on the importation of a book which we are supposed to control for this market, but we give to the customer the impression that, notwithstanding the existence of a house in London, our importing facilities are inadequate and are not to be depended upon.

In the statutes preceding 1891, the owner of the copyright, or his assign, the publisher, was left free to import the English edition of books originating in America, for instance, when the importer happened to prefer the English form. My father did such importing from time to time of English issues of Irving's Works and Ticknor & Field imported English editions of Longfellow and of their other standard authors.

The provision giving the right to importation to libraries, and to individuals, not only works injustice for the American publisher, but works against the interests of the book-buying public in the United States. Our House has from the beginning of the work in England of my father in 1837, done what it could in behalf of a system of international publishing. We have emphasized the advantage to the author and to his readers in producing of any book that was fitted for world-wide circulation separate editions for as many markets as the demand might justify.

The compensation for the author and (for an illustrated book) the compensation for the artist, is, under such an arrangement, divided between all the markets in which editions are placed. The author may be content with a comparatively small payment from each market if he can have returns from a number of markets. The reader on the other hand, secures at a lower price than would otherwise be possible literature of world-wide importance. Examples of such international publishing are the International Science Series of Appleton's; the Heroes of the Nations and Story of the Nations on our own list; the "Cambridge History of English Literature," etc.

A publisher is, however, warranted in making investments in such international undertakings only if he can be assured of the control of his own market. We have invested, for instance, in the "Cambridge History of English Literature" over $32,000. The book is one planned more particularly for library sale. It is too large and too costly for many individual buyers. Under the inequitable provisions of our present statute, the library demand can be supplied, and is being very largely supplied from England. The individual buyer who has an account in London can purchase, and in a number of cases has purchased, the English issue rather than the American. The latter is better printed and better bound, but is somewhat higher in price. The "Literature" has had a substantial sale, but the financial results under these conditions of a divided market, or a partial control of the market, are unsatisfactory.

We should not again, unless our law could be amended, be warranted in making investments in a joint publishing undertaking of this character. In this case the American issue is somewhat dearer than that printed in England. In a number of instances, however, the American publisher is prepared to meet the special requirements of the American market by producing his first edition at a lower price than the English publisher finds advisable. If, therefore, these joint publishing undertakings are blocked or discouraged, the American book reader loses the advantage of having the book presented to his attention here thru American publishing machinery, and if he comes to know about the book, he has the requirement of purchasing the English volume at the higher price in which small lots are imported. The whole system is both unjust and silly.

It fails to carry out the purpose of the copyright law of "encouraging literary production and facilitating the distribution of literature." The responsibility for the provision rests, of course, with the librarians, and they were ready not only to insist upon the provision freeing them from the restrictions of copyright, but to approve that which gave a similar freedom from restriction to the individual buyer.

I should not be very much interested in planning for further amendments to the copyright law unless I could be assured that intelligent consideration would be given to the cancellation of this inequitable provision.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS Annual Gambol of the Commercial Travelers

THE banquet of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday evening, December 27, was the thirty-third of these annual affairs, and was probably more thoroly enjoyed than any other in recent years. The menu, fortunately for the hungry guests, was not censored by Mr. Hoover; the brethren felt they were entitled to at least one good feast in the year at their own expense when not economizing for their firms. The toastmaster, Charles E. Graham, first introduced Sergeant Empey whose talk was an unconventional rapid-firing of question and answer. He made a plea for "smokes" for the boys in France which brought to the Sun Smoke Fund a total of $143.50. Then came Corporal R. Derby Holmes, whose book, "A Yankee in the Trenches," is to be published next week, with a thrilling account of the taking of an isolated trench in which raid every one of those detailed was lost except himself. Irvin Cobb talked in his inimitable way, told stories, and made an eloquent plea for service and undiluted patriotism to our country and our flag in these perilous times.

Addresses followed by H. V. Patterson, vice-president of the Brotherhood, and Brothers F. T. J. Nunan, and C. C. Schepmoes, and as distributor of decorations, "Uncle Bill" Kelly bestowed the presidential scarf on the retiring president, Charles E. Graham. The climax of a joyous evening came when William J. Barse read the following "Bill to Steve" letter, in which he fairly surpassed himself, if not actually Mr. Lardner as well:

New York, Dec. 20, 1917

Dere Steve:

I got your letter tellin' me you wood not come to the B. C. T. dinner on acct. the tickets bein' 10 dollars & Steve I doant blame you a bit for it ain't anythin' but highway robbery. You ain't missin' a thing Steve for everythin' at the dinner will be just the same as it was every year but of coarse it wood be knew to you as you ain't never been to one but now that you aint coming to this one I will right you just what will happen. I doant need to wait until after the dinner for I can tell you now just as well what will happen as I could after the dinner is over.

I am in the Aldine Club the other day to lunch being brung their by Charlie Graham & for a while I doant get why he should by my eats when he ain't got no ax to grind & doant sell me no goods & enny time that stiff spends enny money on you you should ought to look out. Britton, Joe Coyle, Harry Burt & Fred Nunan was their & Steve you should of heard them guys punching the bag about the war. Their wood not be a chanst for the Germans if them birds could run things. After we got through eatin' Graham who is president of the B. C. T. & Old Man Nunan gets me off in a corner & tells me the committee for the B. C. T. dinner want some righter to be at there dinner & right it up so everybody in the book trade will no what a big thing it is. The old bird tells me they is considerin' just too men, Irving Cobb & me & on acct. of this drag he got the committee to deside on me. They think there kiddin' me but where do they get that stuff? What did Cobb ever do like I done. Of course he got sum of his stuff published in the Sat. Eve. Post & magazines like that but did he ever get enny thing in the Publishers Weekly? No. I am wise to Nunan's game. He sez all the committee wants Cobb but he is for me. He thinks I will tell what a good speech he made at the dinner. Fat chance, eh Steve? after I heard him talk at every dinner but Steve he ain't no good at talkin' until he gets ten or twelve under his belt & then he ain't no good and another reason why I would not be a reporter at there dinner is becauz I understand Nunan hasn't got nothin' to do with the dinner this year. You know he always was chairman of the entertainment committee & ust to run things his own way but this year I guess that gang of Irish must have had a fallin' out and are soar on the old bird becauz they appointed Bert Caldwell chairman of the entertainment committee and he ain't asked me to be a reporter and mebbe if I'd went their in that capacity he would throw me out. Graham the poor fish has been byin' cigars and drinks for Nunan all year supposin' he was the main guy of the brotherhood and now Nunan ain't got nothin' to do with it and the poor sucker is out the cigars & drinks he has boughten. At the annual meetin' this year they elected Patterson vice president and Steve I doant need to tell you that he is Irish but at that he's a different kind of Irish from Kelly, Hovendon, McMullen & Nunan. The only decent thing that bunch of Irish ever did was to elect Herman Kleinteich president for 1918 and I guess they onley did that to lend some class to there organization.

I herd Brent Vaughan was comin' on from Chi. to the dinner and that Nunan told him if he would come he would guarantee him his expenses if he played in the P. G. It shows what a crooked bunch they are Steve when a guy can do that but if Vaughan come on and went in the P. G. the trip would not never cost him a cent because he always wins.

Jack Hovendon will be in the recepshun room at 6:30 & between trips to the punch bowl will bone every body for there ten bucks & Steve I guess that sucker doant get more than five out of each ten for his self. Steve, it is great to watch the sailmen come into the recepshun room & see how quick they get to the punch bowl. Every body is invitin' some body else to drink becauz it doant cost nothin'. Charlie Schepmoes will be there with his secretary, Billie Oliver & will be tellin' the gang how they sold over a million Oxford khaki Testaments this year & Charlie Duryea will not never say a word until he finds out how many Schep claims he sold & then he will beat his amt. Bert Caldwell will come in & tell if they only had the dinner where he wanted them to it wood be sum dinner. This is the onley dinner Bert attends during the year that he doant run but he tries hard every year to run this one. Britton will not be near so joyous as he was at last year's dinner as that was the 1st one he ever attended & he was not on to the ropes. Ed Vass who is always talking about "me and Jake" will explain to the gang that Jake Daubert promisted to come to the dinner with him but couldn't on acct. he broke his leg or sum other excuse. Joe Green is always claimin' that Vass never even seen Jake Daubert except from the bleachers but Steve I don't believe a guy wood lie about a little thing like that. Billie Edwards will have sum buyer on his staff & Steve I guess that guy is foxy for then his bosses have to pay for both tickets & it doant cost Bill a cent.

While the sailmen are all visitin' in the recepshun room & tellin' each other how there sails was twict as much as last year Al McMullen, Arthur Leon & Fred Nunan will sneak into the dinin' room & put cards at each plate & Steve it is as good as a circus to see them birds fight to get there friends near the head of the table. After they get them all fixed Uncle Bill Kelley will come in & change them all a round to suit his self. Then Hovendon will say the groceries is ready & all come in & tie on the feed bag.

When the eats is gone Bill Kelley will present Graham with a gavel & pull sum sob stuff & tell us how he has presented the gavel to the retiring president for 33 years. Then Graham will tell Bill what a honor has been bestowed (some word eh Steve?) on him & how he will not never forget to wear it at the dinners with credit to the Brotherhood.

Then Graham will call on the speakers & Steve the poor fish doant dare to call on enny one except the ones Hovendon tells him to. They will be a lot of old ones pulled about Jack Hovendon's whiskers, Al McMullen's carpet slippers, Billie Walker's exentricities (I guess I doant know sum big words, eh Steve?) & when sum guy is tryin' to make a speech Uncle Bill Kelly will but in & start singin' "Viva la Companie" in his usual come-all-ye-style. Graham will call on Fred Nunan for a speech but that old bird will not be in the banquet room & they will have to send sum body after him & if the feller they send nose his business he will go write down to the main floor to the sody fountain & find Nunan talkin' to the feller back o' the bar—I mean counter. Nunan will then come in & say that he has not never prepared no speech & did not expect to be called on but Steve that is a lie for that guy rights out his speech a head of time & rents a room at the Waldorf the mornin' of the dinner & Stays up their all day resitin' what he is gonna speak & then he has the nerve to tell the gang that his speech is not made up a head of time & then they think he is good. He puts it over that gang every year. At that Steve he is a pretty good old stiff & I would not never put the gang wise to him for what good wood it do me to be a squealer, eh Steve?

Patterson will get up & tell a bunch of Irish stories that date back to the big wind in Ireland & the onley reason Patty gives up his ten for the dinner is to get that chanst & at that Steve they are good except that Patty doant tell them as good as an Irish Cop told the same stories to me when I was a kid.

Billie Walker will be called on for his speech & Steve you should ought to hear the words that bird uses. He is always quoting from Epictetus & Marcus Aurilius & no body understands nothin' what he is talkin' about but his self & it is no cinch that he does. Nunan's boy, Jack Mullen, will also be called on. He ain't not no talker on acct. of bein' with Nunan so much & never gettin' a chanst to talk but he will sing an Irish song which always makes a hit with the Irish bunch that run the dinner even if it ain't no good.

ANOTHER SMASHING SINGLE TITLE DISPLAY—THIS TIME MARY ROBERTS RINEHART'S "LONG LIVE THE KING," IN THE STORE OF FOWLER BROS., LOS ANGELES

Joe Greene & Johnnie Winter is too other members of the younger set that always come to the dinner & gets a chanst to sing & dance and mebbe they ain't sum spielers and why shouldent they ought to be for they are out every nite on the rode dancing with the dames they know in every city they make. They always seem to enjoy there selves for it is the only stag affair they attend during the entire year. Steve I guess them boys ain't strong with the ladies.

Bill Haldane will have charge of the music & will have his usual quartette of ham-fatters on the job singin' "Mother McCree," "River Shannon" & other Irish songs becauz he would lose his job if they didn't sing them songs.

When the speakin' is dun, sum of the gang will go home, sum will retire to the main floor & put there foot on a brass rail to help hold it down & sum of the gang will decorate the mahogany but not never Jack Hovenden. Henry Burt will have to hurry a way to attend to his regular duties of closing up Broadway & others will get a P. G. Arthur Leon will take charge of the deLuxe game, be the banker, take care of Kitty & pick out sum lucky guy to snark with & at that Steve he ought to have that honor on acct. he dassent stay out onley too nites a year, the nite of the annual meetin' & the nite of the dinner & enny guy who onley has too nites a year out ought to have every thing his own way. It's different with his partner for Vic Cupples doant have to telephone when he wants to stay out but just stays & their ain't nothin' never said about it. That's the way to have them at home. No one can get in this de luxe game unlest Leon wants them & Cupples onley gets in becauz he is Leon's partner in business but their ain't no 50-50 in there P. G. Leon will get Billie Walker, Joe Coyle, Fred Nunan, Harry Burt & Charlie Graham. They will pull the usual comical stuff about "are we plain Mousers" & Sum more just like that which is older than Patty's Irish stories. You will notice, Steve, that every body in that game is not no traveler but all bosses becauz no travelers can afford to play in that game on acct. there all being home & not on expense acct. & havin' to play with there own money.

The travelers have to get up a game of there own which is always managed by Bob Hays & the first one Bob asks is Rotch Drake becauz he is the easiest thing that ever happened in a P. G. Then he will get Charlie Nourse, Frank Hall, Westy Westbrook & sum more peddlers.

The de luxe gang will order a box of Corona cigars which costs 50c. each & them suckers has the nerve to say their ain't no money in the publishing business & the poor peddlers will order a box of Waldorf Astoria 2 for a quarter which is not the kind they smoke when they are on the road.

During the game Bill Kelly, Hovenden, McMullen & Bert Caldwell will but in several times & try to be funny but Steve who ever saw a man what would laugh at any joke when he was loser in a P. G.

Herman Kleinteich will have his usual job of taking Uncle Bill home to Brooklyn wich is the penalty he has to pay for living in that burg.

When the game is over about day light all the fellers will have to ride home on the subway on acct. of bein' losers except Arthur Leon & Henry Burt who always take taxicabs after a P. G. & they should ought to do that beacuz the other fellers are payin' for it. Well Steve I gues I have told you about all that will happen & you will save ten dollars by not goin' to the dinner & on acct. of my righting you this long letter you should ought send me five. If enny thing should happen at the dinner that I ain't told you, will right again.

Resp'ly

BILL.

P. S. I just heard today that Cobb was going to be at the dinner & right it up & if he does I suppose they will call on him for a speech and he will try to be funny. Of coarse he will get sum applause but if he does it will be from Rotch Drake, Bob Hayes & sum more of that Doran crowd who has to clap or lose their jobs & mebbe 2 or 3 other people will clap there hands but Steve if they do it will be publishers who is trying to get Cobb away from Doran, but you can bet, Steve, I am gonna sit on my hands while that feller is talkin' & he will not never get no laugh out o' me.

The souvenir presented by the retiring president was a gold coat lapel flag. As usual the original founder, promoter, guardian and best friend of the Brotherhood, John Hoven-don, secretary and treasurer for thirty-three years, sat by the toastmaster and surveyed with satisfaction the fruits of his ceaseless enthusiasm.

OBITUARY NOTES

WILLIAM ANDRUS, aged 80 years, senior member of the long established firm of Andrus & Church, booksellers, stationers, printers and bookbinders of Ithaca, N. Y., died on December 18 after a lingering illness.

CHARLES MULFORD ROBINSON, authority on city planning and civic art, died in Albany, N. Y., Dec. 28 at the age of forty-six. His principal works were: "The Improvement of Towns and Cities," 1901, rewritten on a larger scale and published in England under the title "Modern Civic Art"; "The Call of the City," 1908; and "The Width and Arrangement of Streets," 1911.

PERSONAL NOTES

WHITNEY DARROW will represent Charles Scribner's Sons in Boston.

THOMAS MAHONEY, junior salesman with F. A. Stokes Co., has joined the army. No one has as yet been selected for his place.

NELSON DOUBLEDAY has joined the Navy and is assigned, we understand, to a post in Washington.

RODNEY JANES, formerly with C. F. Graham & Co., will represent the Hubbell-Leavens Co. who are launching a new line of novelties in toy books.

J. H. DIXON of the Macmillan staff of salesmen has resigned, while Matthew Smith, house salesman, will hereafter attend, with Louis Esposit, to the New York City trade.

ASA DON DICKINSON, a librarian, more recently in the editorial department of Doubleday, Page & Co., has left that company to enter the American Library Association war work.

MR. C. C. SHOEMAKER is the author, we take it, of the little pamphlet "A Christmas Letter from the Men's Club of Wayne (Pa.) to the Men of Radnor Township, Delaware County, Pa., enlisted in the service of their country on December 25, 1917."

JOHN HENRY APELER, for seven years in the employ of Doubleday, Page & Co., more recently as assistant sales manager, has resigned his position with that concern to become sales manager for Moffat, Yard & Co. Mr. Apeler, who is but twenty-four, is one of the youngest book sales managers in the country.

JAMES F. MASON, founder of the Dodge Publishing Co., and for many years its president, has offered his services to the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. and will sail for France January 2. Mr. Mason has entirely recovered his health, the loss of which prompted his retirement from active business a year ago. It is understood that his work with the Y. M. C. A. will be that of a business executive. Mr. Mason's address will be 31, Avenue Montaigne, Paris.

PERIODICAL NOTES

THE FIRST number of The New Success—Marden's Magazine has been issued in New York.

The Survey issued on October 7 the first instalment of what promises to be the most complete bibliography on "Social Welfare in Time of War and Disaster" that has yet appeared. A three-page supplement appeared in the issue of December 8 and others will follow.

A NEW FINANCIAL periodical to appear this fall is The Investors' Protector, a monthly published in Boston "in the interest of owners of shares and bonds of American railroad, public utility and industrial corporations." Nathan L. Amster is president, C. R. Jeffers treasurer, and H. A. Brown, secretary.

BEGINNING IN THE January number of Harper's Magazine Mrs. Humphry Ward's "A Writer's Recollections" will appear in serial form. Many familiar names in English letters and education, not the least of which are Dr. Arnold of Rugby, the author's grandfather, and Matthew Arnold, her uncle, make especially fascinating these biographical reminiscences of a well-known novelist.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT's investigation of disloyal and seditious expressions in newspapers and periodicals has led to the compilation of a list of 200 publications which may be denied the use of the mails. For the most part these papers are printed in English.

IT IS MOST fitting that the daughter of Julia Ward Howe, the woman who wrote "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," should bring out a collection of songs of the great war. Laura E. Richards has dedicated "To Arms," published by the Page Co., to her famous mother.

"READ THE BEST BOOKS FIRST. Our Public, one of the most critical in London, is now reading." Such is the brief and effective heading of a single column three-inch ad. of a London bookseller in a recent number of the Literary Supplement to the London Times. Seven titles are listed.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have postponed until mid-January the publication of their edition of Pinero's dramatic works in four volumes selected and edited by Clayton Hamilton. Montrose Moses' first volume in his collection of American plays has also been postponed until this date.

"WHERE the Souls of Men Are Calling," by Credo Harris, is to be brought out soon by the Britton Publishing Co. The story is founded upon fact and presents a vivid chapter from the battle front of France. Mr. Harris, who is stationed in France, is one of twenty-six specially chosen Americans now serving in an official capacity with the I. R. C.

THE "Annual Summary Number" of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, published January 26, will afford publishers an excellent chance to bring before the retail trade and librarians the leaders on their lists during the past year. The last half of 1917 was notable as ushering in a period of decided popularity for non-fiction and the more notable of these titles should be stocked right on thru the new year.

OWING TO increases in the cost of printing and binding, Little, Brown & Co. have advanced the price of some of its standard cook books, including Fannie Merritt Farmer's "The Boston Cooking School Book" to $2, "The New Book of Cookery" to $1.75, "Food and Cookery for the Sick and Convalescent" to $1.75; and Mary J. Lincoln's "The Boston Cook Book" to $2.

A NOVEL which promises to be a popular January leader is Baroness von Hutten's "The Bag of Saffron" (Appleton), whose plot is dear to everyone's heart: the regeneration of a proud, ambitious society woman accustomed to bending the will of all about her, and of course who can help being glad when the worm turns at last and the selfish pampered darling learns the lesson she has taught others?

IN PREPARATION for a discussion on paper cost to be held before the Federal Trade Commission in Washington on Jan. 7, manufacturers of news print have been asked to fill out a detailed questionnaire. Each company signatory to the agreement is to furnish the monthly cost and profit reports on news print paper, sulphite, ground wood, and prepared wood, to be submitted on forms issued for the purpose.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. announce the publication date of Daniel J. McCarthy's "The Prisoner of War in Germany" for January 12. Of this book James W. Gerard says in his usual concise manner: "I cannot praise too highly Dr. McCarthy's book. He gives in detail an account of prison conditions in Germany. The better treatment of the prisoners is largely owing to his work and that of Dr. Taylor and the other American inspectors."

LALPAT RAI, the well-known Hindoo lawyer now in America, has followed his "Young India" by "England's Debt to India." This book, just published by B. W. Huebsch, consists largely of quotations from documents and speeches of well-known English economists and administrators, so arranged as to give an informative survey of economic conditions in India under British rule.

DODD, MEAD & Co. are offering to members of the trade $100 in prizes—one of $50, one of $20, and three of $10—for the five best critical letters on "Carolyn of the Corners" by Ruth Belmore Endicott submitted to them by February 15. The judges will be the editors of the Bookman and the "New International Encyclopedia." The prizes will be awarded March 1. "Carolyn of the Corners" is to be published January 26.

ADDED TO the list of first-hand source war tales, and reminding one of Alan Seeger's and Victor Chapman's letters is "Harry Butters, R.F.A." (Lane), the life, but mostly the letters of a California boy who was killed fighting on the Somme. Here is another instance of one of the many men of "finer feelings"—men who have been accustomed to a life of culture and intellectual luxury—throwing in his lot with the others, bearing the hardships with even a certain zest, and writing home the keenest sort of high-pressure reactions of the new life.

THE STUDY of foreign languages in the elementary schools of New York City will be discontinued after February 1, according to a decision by the Board of Education at its final meeting. This decision, while acting equally on all foreign languages, weighs most heavily against German, because about 65 per cent of the pupils studying foreign languages in the elementary schools are studying German. Foreign languages will be retained in the seventh, eighth, and ninth years of the intermediate schools and in the intermediate departments of the elementary schools.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. are publishing within a week or so two new war books: Captain Alan Bott's "Cavalry of the Clouds," a book which has won attention in England under the less spirited title, "An Airman's Outings," and Frazier Hunt's "Blown in by the Draft," an attempt to describe the outward appearance and interpret the soul of the new national army which this country is creating. The author, as correspondent for a New York paper, has lived in the cantonments with the drafted men from the day of the assembling of the first contingents until the present time.

NOW WHILE every publisher is on tip-toe for big soldier books by Americans fighting under the newly raised American flag and yet always cautious lest he burn his fingers with too many such books, Houghton Mifflin puts another candidate in the field in "Norman Prince: An American Who Died for the Cause He Loved," a volume of letters from this American aviator, and the George H. Doran Co. announces for early publication "Here and There with the Fighting Sixty-ninth" by Joyce Kilmer, now in France with the "Rainbow Division."

AMONG THE NOTABLE pieces of just-before-Christmas advertising copy was a sixty line three-column ad. of Dorothy Canfield's "Understood Betsy," facing the editorial page of the New York Evening Post. Under the heading, "That Rare Thing—A Good Book for Girls," the ad. goes on to tell how H. M. H. writes to May Lamberton Becker of "The Readers' Guide" department of the New York Evening Post asking for a list of good books for a girl of nine; then follows Mrs. Becker's strong recommendation of "Betsy." The ad. was attractive typographically—restrained and with lots of white space—and, we fancy, brought substantial returns from Post readers.

TWO VOLUMES of literary criticism of contemporary writers—which, according to Jules Lemaitre, is not criticism at all but conversation—are being put on the market by Henry Holt & Co.: Stuart P. Sherman's "On Contemporary Literature" and "Some Modern Novelists" by Helen Thomas Follett and Wilson Follett. Both criticisms include analyses of Henry James, George Meredith, H. G. Wells and Arnold Bennett. The Folletts, many of whose papers appeared in the Yale Review and Atlantic Monthly, also characterize Gissing, De Morgan, Howells, Phillpotts, Galsworthy, Conrad and Edith Wharton. Incidentally it may come as a bit of a surprise to find William De Morgan and Henry James classed by them among "Novelists of Yesterday" along with Meredith, Gissing and Hardy. Mr. Sherman's book contributes suggestive chapters on Anatole France, Austin, Moore, Dreiser, and Mark Twain.

NOWADAYS WHEN "Leave It to Jane," "Pollyanna," "Polly With a Past," "Chu Chin Chow" and similar cheery relaxing plays crowd the hoardings, it would seem that tired America doesn't want its day capped with more war in the form of a war play, tho earlier in the war "Lilac Time," "Over There" and similar war plays met with great favor. The situation on the stage bears out the experience of the book-trade: the able war book or play succeeds, but there is little place for the merely sentimental or gory. Bosworth Crocker has written a play which would seem to fall into the former category: "The Pawns of War," a play which visualizes the German invasion of Belgium and of which John Galsworthy says in his foreword: "It has a sustained crescendo . . . very gripping and should play extremely well. I congratulate the author on having written a play that is so well worth while, so lifelike and so forceful." Little, Brown is publishing it to-day.

OF GENERAL conditions as we come about and head up into the new year Dun's Review has the following encouraging word to say in the leading summary of "The Week" closing December 29: "What has been in many respects the most eventful year of economic history neared its closing with the announcement of governmental control of the country's transportation systems causing a striking recovery in prices of securities, but with recognition that not all of the readjustments arising from war conditions have yet been witnessed. With the business outlook still obscure and likely to remain uncertain, there is no abatement of the disposition to operate ahead with caution, and the customary policy of deferring important engagements until after the year-end now appears in many quarters. But what has stood out prominently thru recent months of unprecedented changes, has been the absence of conspicuous loss of confidence and of any general movement toward cancellation of existing contracts. The fact is, that while some unsettlement has necessarily been experienced in trade and industry, and tho there has been not a little hesitation in most directions, faith in the future has not appreciably diminished [italics ours in both cases] and not only have many new concerns started, but the year's insolvency returns make the best numerical exhibit since 1911."

THAT RECENT organization of the French publishers for export trade, the Société d'Exportation des Editions Françaises, is featuring the following suggestive list of titles for exploitation by American booksellers: "Lazarine" by Paul Bourget, "Le Triomphe de la Marseillaise" by Louis de Joanthe, both published by Plon-Nourrit; "Légendes d'Alsace" by O. Gevin-Cassal, a fully illustrated book for children in regular and gift book editions (Boivin & Cie); "L'Encyclopédie de la Jeunesse: Qui Pourquoi? Comment?" which is volume three of an illustrated book of general information for children (Larousse); "Autour de Noyon" with the sub-title "Sur les Traces des Barbares" by Cte. de Caix Saint-Aymour (Boivin & Cie); and "La France Héroïque et Ses Alliés" by G. Geffroy, L. Lacour, and L. Lumet, the first volume of one of the quarto Larousse collection, to be issued in monthly parts. The latest war books on the list of Plon nourrit are: "Les Grands Jours de France en Amérique: Mission Viviani-Joffre (avril-mai 1917)," the notes of an eye-witness; "Lettres d'un Officier de Chasseurs Alpins" by Ferdinand Belmont; "Les Derniers Jours du Fort de Vaux (9 mars-7 juin, 1916)," and "Les Captifs Délivrés" (Douamont-Vaux, octobre-novembre, 1916), by Henry Bordeaux; "En Campagne," the impressions of an officer, by Marcel Dupont; "Crapouillots: Feuilles d'un Carnet de Guerre" by Paul Duval-Arnould; "Au Champ d'Honneur" by Hugues Le Roux; "Le Tube 1233: Souvenir d'un Chef de Pièce" and "Avec une Batterie de 75" by Paul Lintier; and "La Mêlée de Flandres: Ypres et l'Yser" and "La Victoire de la Marne" by Louis Madelin.

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday night.

Under the headings of "BOOKS WANTED" and "BOOKS FOR SALE" book-trade subscribers are given under their own names five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertising for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding one hundred lines a year, a maximum of fifty lines under "Books Wanted" and fifty lines under "Books for Sale," and if over five lines are sent for either department in only one issue, or fifty lines for each department within the calendar year, the excess is at ten cents a line. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "HELP WANTED" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 15 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in DECEMBER, 1917

This Reference List includes and classifies all books entered in the annotated Weekly Record during the past month, together with additional titles not therein listed, covering law and medicine, many government documents, university publications, pamphlets, and books of limited character. All works are here entered under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in CAPS and SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics. Under subject entries asterisks (*) designate books previously entered in the Weekly Record, in most cases with descriptive annotation.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in caps, Q, O, D, etc.; for books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i. e., GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

To Publishers

The Annual Summary Number of the Publishers' — Weekly —

to be issued under date of January 26th is one of the special issues that gets special attention in the trade due to the importance of its contents.

¶ It affords an excellent opportunity for publishers to recall to the attention of booksellers the "leaders" on their respective lists that have been weighed in the balance and found worthy in the past year, and that can be safely stocked for the coming year. Advertisements of such lists would be most suggestive and helpful for librarians.

¶ Advertising copy should be sent in promptly, not later than January 14th, if proofs are wanted in time for correction.
